

REL 250: Christian Vocation and Church Leadership

A study of the call to Christian service in the Church and the world. This course will examine the concepts of ministry and the call, the nature and structure of the Church, contemporary issues facing the Church, as well as resources and programs used by the Church to promote faith and service in local congregations. This course is open to students of all denominations and religious traditions. This course may not be taken to fulfill any core requirement.

Credits: Credits 3

Semester Offered:

Semester Offered

Offered at departmental discretion.