

CRJ 101: Introduction to Criminal Justice

This course offers a survey of the fundamental components of the American criminal justice system, presenting an overview of law enforcement approaches, court systems, juvenile justice, correction, probation and parole structures. The nature of crime in the United States and society's response is explored. Recurring issues within these core subjects are addressed including terrorism, social justice, drug crime, police function and social control in addition to current controversies in the criminal justice system.

Credits: Credits 3

Semester Offered:

Semester Offered

Offered every semester.